Yvonne Newell:

The education innovation studio is a hub for creativity, collaboration and educational innovation.

Teaching is design work and we understand our educators are time poor and so we recognise the need for a dedicated learning design service that adequately supports educators throughout the entire design process. Our specialists will develop content and learning activities with and for educators.

The studio will partner with educators to design and deliver high quality, engaging and original educational solutions that will uplift the student experience and enhance learning outcomes.

The studio will be working on projects like the VET transformation project where we've been transforming units and applying templates and universal design for learning principles to ensure a more consistent and improved student experience.
